MEMORANDUM FOR: Chairman, Scientific Intelligence Committee
SUBJECT : Scientist with Broad Perspectives

1. Establishing a stable of consultants for the SIC, who, hopefully, will have insight on future scientific and technological issues, has considerable merit. The first listing, while extensive and showing considerable bias toward physics, is generally devoid of scientists that have wrestled with the broader problems of science and society. The following individuals should have considerable insight into future technology problems.

2. While the above individuals look at science across the board, the following individuals have special interests that do not appear to be well represented on the first listing:

All of the above represent a first cut; at your convenience I would like to discuss this subject with you further.
